James Devane / Getty Images Do you ever dream of a wedding fit for the movies? Hollywood has a knack for creating unrealistic expectations and grand weddings far outside of the average wedding budget. At least it looks that way—after all, it's Hollywood: sometimes it's all illusion. But some of your favorite fictional weddings (we're talking Big and Carrie, David and Patrick, Bella and Edward) might actually be in your budget. European savings platform Raisin UK did a study to estimate the cost of 20 fictional (both TV and film) weddings. The approximate cost of each wedding was calculated using canon information, the cost of real-life venues (or estimates of fictional venues), and the average cost of dresses, flowers, transportation, and entertainment. Some of our favorites made the list, like the lavish Singapore wedding in Crazy Rich Asians, complete with lush greenery and over-the-top floral arrangements. In the movie, the wedding is supposed to cost a whopping $40 million. Turns out it's only worth almost $9 million based on real-life calculations. On the other hand, Bella and Edward's magical wedding in the Twilight Saga: Breaking Dawn Part 1 (although ethereal and envious) isn't as pricey as we thought, ringing in at $36,000. Wondering what your other favorite wedding scenes cost in real life? Scroll on to see where your favorite TV and movie weddings rank. 01 of 20 Courtesy of Warner Bros. Entertainment. The Crazy Rich Asians wedding always takes our breath away. Between the glittering gown and the flower-lined water aisle, this multi-million dollar wedding never fails to impress—and left us with so much décor inspiration! 02 of 20 This simple yet exquisite wedding between Mary (Michelle Dockery) and Matthew Crawley (Dan Stevens) was truly fit for royalty. Mary's tiara alone is valued at $200,000. 03 of 20 Of course Carrie Bradshaw (Sarah Jessica Parker) showed up to her and Big's (Christopher North) lavish wedding in an impeccably stylish gown, and we couldn't help but wonder, why did Big leave her at the altar? 04 of 20 Universal Pictures/Courtesy of Neal Peters Collection This over-the-top wedding was a result of Lillian's snobby friend Helen, but after some roadblocks, they were able to enjoy this fun, slightly tacky, wedding. 05 of 20 George Banks (Steve Martin) wasn't quite ready to walk his little girl Annie (Kimberly Williams) down the aisle, but Annie and Bryan sure pulled out all the stops for their big day. The wedding was tasteful with beautiful floral arrangements, strung lights, and a gorgeous gown. 06 of 20 Bridget (Renée Zellweger) and Mark's (Colin Firth) long-awaited nuptials were accented with beautiful floral arrangements, including an arch over the altar, which couldn't have been cheap. 07 of 20 A fairytale wedding that dreams are made of. 08 of 20 It was an exquisite day—minus Chandler almost running out and Joey almost missing the ceremony. But it all turned out to be perfect because he's her lobster, after all! 09 of 20 Summit Entertainment/Courtesy Neal Peters Collection This was the most extravagant backyard wedding we've ever seen. Is Alice available to book as a wedding planner? Asking for a friend. 10 of 20 Patrick and David's wedding was simply the best, from the symbolism of their town hall venue to Moira's iconic officiant outfit to Patrick singing Mariah Carey's "Always Be My Baby" as his vows. This wedding brings us to tears every single time. 11 of 20 This wedding didn't go exactly as planned (Marshall almost shaved off all his hair, their harpist's water broke, Lily's ex showed up, etc). But "Lilypad" and "Marshmallow" made up for it with their colorful flowers and Lily's beautiful dress. 12 of 20 Their beautiful and elegant woody wedding planned by their best friend Pepper Saltzman had to be re-arranged last second because of spreading wildfires. But they were able to make due with a gorgeous ceremony at sunset. 13 of 20 Of course, they saved some money by choosing the swamp as their venue, but nevertheless a grandiose occasion! 14 of 20 Universal Pictures/Courtesy Neal Peters Collection Here we go again! We can't stop obsessing over this wedding atop a mountain with a view of all of Greece. Although, Sky and Sophie weren't even the ones who tied the knot at this wedding. Sophie's mom Donna (Meryl Streep) and Sam (Pierce Brosnan) got hitched at the last second when Sky and Sophie decide not to. 15 of 20 After being late to the ceremony because of the symmetry problems, Sheldon and Amy met at the altar. Their adorable ceremony was filled with punny and nerdy science jokes. 16 of 20 In this popular Australian soap opera from the '80s, viewers long-awaited the nuptials of this fan-favorite couple. The wedding was filmed in the beautiful Holy Trinity Church in Doncaster, Melbourne. 17 of 20 The red wedding in Game of Thrones was pretty inexpensive. However, it is definitely not the most ideal wedding of all time. 18 of 20 These two neighbors got married in the woods under the stars and Chinese lanterns after Susan surprised Mike with the low-key ceremony. 19 of 20 Jim and Pam's wedding was very inexpensive but was still "double the pleasure, double the fun." Of course, their coworkers and bridal party walked down the aisle to Chris Brown's "Forever," a trend that was extremely popular at the time. Pam and Jim then saved up for a trip to Niagara Falls to elope on the water. 20 of 20 This wedding rings in at the bottom of our list, given the two eloped in a chapel and then spent the night on Marge's family couch. Nora Lum, aka Awkwafina (her star-making, rapping alter ego), has had quite the year starring in hit films like "Ocean's 8" and "Crazy Rich Asians." But the New York native doesn't let fame get to her head. As part of TODAY Style's "Why I Love My" series, the rapper, comedian and actress shares why representation matters and how she learned to love her deep, raspy voice. 'Crazy Rich Asians' star Awkwafina knows her voice sounds like a '58-year-old divorce attorney' Aug. 27, 2018 05:17 I love my voice and guess what? I didn't always love my voice. When I was 7 years old, I would answer my family phone and people wouldn't know I was 7 or 75. I've always always had this voice. Someone said that I sound like a 58-year-old divorce attorney. I'll take it. Some people say I sound like the Allstate man. Sure. I was really insecure about it because, you know, even when men impersonate my voice they go lower. But I think I've come to love it because people hear my voice now and it's the first thing they notice. They know it's me. I can't change it but I can embrace it. People will never forget that voice, the voice of an angel Satan. Representation is important because, first of all, it affects the way that we're treated in real life. And second of all, you don't know how to dream if you don't see it. If you don't see it, you won't know it's possible. For me, I had one glimpse of representation when I was young that had a huge impact on my life. If it weren't for that moment, I would not be where I am today and that was channel-surfing and catching Margaret Cho on Comedy Central. I remember exactly what I was doing when I saw her. So even just to have DM-ed (direct messaged) with Margaret Cho was like an out-of-body experience for me. She has inspired and influenced my life in ways that I can't even imagine or even know. She has an extremely big heart and is extremely supportive of me and this movement of up-and-coming Asian-Americans. And to even be in a song with me was very, very, very cool. So if you're reading this, Margaret, I love you. (Margaret Cho) has inspired and influenced my life in ways that I can't even imagine or even know. "Youtubel think when people watch "Crazy Rich Asians" and they come out of the theater and they're crying, there's this overwhelming feeling that comes over them. That is the power of representation. You don't realize how much of a true privilege it is until you see it with your own eyes. We apologize, this video has expired. 'Crazy Rich Asians' cast on the film's impact on representation in Hollywood Aug. 15, 2018 06:15 My first ever show as Awkwafina was at Sarah Lawrence College. I was very nervous and I showed up having never interacted with my fans (from my YouTube channel) and this girl came up to me and she looked just like I looked in college and she was like, "Thank you for doing what you do because it's important that you exist. Thank you for existing." And, you know, I didn't really think about what that meant at the time but now it's a moment that will never leave me. Like, it doesn't matter what I'm doing exactly, it's just the fact that I'm there. I think that it gave her hope that she can do it, too. I know that I don't want to be the last. I don't want this movie to be the last. When you're an Asian-American kid, it's difficult because you negotiate between two identities. You negotiate between the identity you leave at home when you go to your American school and you have to pretend that you're one of them. And at home you have to be your parents' kid, so there's always that. And that "lunch box moment" (when kids are teased for their unfamiliar, cultural food) is an example of how that comes out. I just wanted a bagel. Awkwafina stands with her costars of "Ocean's 8" (from left) Sarah Paulson, Sandra Bullock, Cate Blanchett, Anne Hathaway and Mindy Kaling. Daniel Zuchnik / FilmMagic! think the first ever pinch-me moment I had was when I was cast in "Neighbors 2." It was my first movie, my first time ever acting. And there was one night shoot where my soul kind of left my body and then it came back in and I looked around me and I was surrounded by Seth Rogen, Rose Byrne, Zac Efron and Chloe Moretz and I was like, "Oh, this is weird. It's weird." And also that they were all lovely. To my younger self I say, "Don't be worried all the time. Don't be scared. Things will be OK. And I also think that you're weird, but it will come in handy later." As told to TODAY's Emily Sher. This story has been edited and condensed for clarity.
